

LUSA Works to Rule

Laurentian University Staff Association (LUSA) began a work-to-rule campaign last Thursday in an attempt to reach negotiations for a contract between the University and the union.

LUSA, which represents 170 clerical, technical, secretarial, computer, administrative and other employees at Laurentian, has been without a contract since June 30.

As of midnight August 30, LUSA has been in a legal strike position.

Negotiations between the University and LUSA were at a standstill over the Labour

Day weekend. Many outstanding issues remain unresolved.

Regarding monetary concerns the last offer from the University was a 1.8 per cent increase in wages, or an average of 18 cents per hour. The union proposal was for an increase to match the increase in the cost of living in the last year — approximately 5 per cent.

Despite the University's current deficit, LUSA believes that its proposal is well within the financial ability of the University. Laurentian received a 9.4 per cent increase in grants from the Ministry of Education over last year.

As well, the percentage increase this year in student applications at Laurentian is among the highest of all Ontario universities.

An information bulletin from LUSA describes the University's contract offer as "not only unrealistic and unreasonable, but certainly undemocratic."

To assist students who live on campus and who may get caught in the crossfire of the dispute, the Students' General Association, in conjunction with l'association des Etudiants Français, are distributing Residence passes. These passes will enable these students to cross LUSA picket lines should the situation arise.

At press time, the SGA has determined its stance on the campaign to be neutral.

The School of Social Work has come out in support of LUSA's efforts. Both the Students' Council and the faculty endorse the work-to-rule campaign. The School wishes to reassure its students that there will be no penalty for late registration so that they can honour picket lines.

Bovey Commission Comes To Sudbury

The commission on the Future Development of the Universities of Ontario will be winding up its research with public hearings in university cities this month.

The three person task force, better known as the Bovey Commission, was set up by the provincial government last January to suggest ways "to better enable the universities of Ontario to adjust to changing social and economic conditions."

In a 29-page discussion paper, released in June, the commission outlines areas of concern and lists questions related to those areas which should be addressed by those who submit briefs.

The areas of concern identified by the Bovey Commission are: quality, accessibility, adaptability to changing social and economic conditions, balancing the various roles of universities, funding arrangements, and overall co-ordination of the university system.

The commission asks respondents how best to implement reforms such as reductions in the liberal arts, more specialized and differentiated universities, faculty retirement and renewal, and redistribution of funds.

The commission has come under fire ever since its terms of reference were drawn up because many in the university community feel the widespread reforms being considered would restrict accessibility in the name of enhanced quality and reduced costs.

The Sudbury fire on the commission is happening this first week in September with a spectrum of presentations. Students at Laurentian are having their voice heard through the Students' General Association representative, president Barry Schmidt.

The commission, which is a descendant of the Parrot Report, is due to report to the minister by November 15.

LU Pool Golden

Laurentian University's pool, the spot where Canada's newest sports hero Alex Baumann trained for the past ten years, has been officially named the Olympic Gold Pool by the University's Board of Governors.

The announcement was made by Board Chairperson Norm Forest during special homecoming celebrations for Alex at the University.

Olympic Gold symbolizes excellence and perseverance, strength and dedication. Olympic Gold is in honour of two champions, Alex and coach Dr. Jeno Tihanyi, and associate professor of child growth and development at Laurentian.

Baumann, a political science student, earned a spot in sports history with two world's records at Los Angeles. It has been 72 years since Canada last won a pair of swimming golds. Baumann's performance at the 1984 Games made breaking that drought look easy. The Laurentian student managed to swim the 400 meters individual medley in 4:17.41, breaking his own world record. He then added the 200 metres title to that, winning in 2:01.42.

Since making these achievements Alex has been quite busy attending events in his honour. A synopsis of these events as well as his athletic feats will be forthcoming in Lambda.

WELCOME BACK!

Here we are, back at the grindstone. Our carefree lives of summer are reluctantly being rearranged to accommodate our new routines of classes, cramming, and coping. Actually, the student rituals of partying 'till the sun comes up, learning as much as can be absorbed, and keeping your head above water are really the sorts of things we are anxious to get back to. To slip into that comfortable and familiar lifestyle is the anticipation of us all.

This year however, it won't be easy.

Slapping us in the face as we walk in the door this registration is a dispute between the University, a.k.a. the administration, and the Staff Association, LUSA. The union is exercising its right to strike quite legitimately and legally. Similarly, the administration is being fiscally tight as all good management is.

In the middle of this are the students and faculty.

As much as we may wish that this doesn't affect us, it does. The day-to-day functioning of the University will be virtually at a standstill because of the inability of the University and LUSA to reach an agreement. How we, the students, react to the situation can influence certain aspects of the negotiations.

Both the University and LUSA work because of our existence. Should our existence become an active entity instead of a placid pot pourri of disjointed individuals, we can become a body to contend with.

The need for students to organize themselves is even more pressing for us at Laurentian now than ever before. As I write, the Bovey Commission is sitting on campus hearing community briefs on the future of education in Ontario. Does this concern students? Only a little. It is no mistake that the hearings are this first week in September — that time of the year when students are most organized. Developing a method to restructure the university system through accessibility modifications and without increased funds is their mandate and it affects us directly. We must be critical of the plans they come up with — not to mention suspicious. (Why are they holding the hearings at this convenient time for us?)

Student services at Laurentian need revamping urgently. Have you tried to find a place to live or a room to organize in lately? The reason services have degenerated so much is because students at Laurentian have not been organized in any coherent way for years. If you aren't organized, together, informed and alert, you'll get walked over.

Whether we like it or not the days of juggling just classes and parties are over. Into our act we must fit organizing and mobilizing. It's time for students to recognize the power they have.

THOUGHT

Many of you are reading this article are being introduced to Lambda for the first time, and I would like to thank the editor of this student publication for the opportunity to communicate with you.

Lambda is certainly not the only thing that is new as you entre university life and I would like to address my remarks to those students living in residence for the first time. For many this is the first time you have been away from home for an extended period of time and that will create stresses and concerns over the next few weeks. If you feel down and need someone to talk with, please remember that there are dons and proctors who are concerned about you and are there to talk with you and help you. Residence living can be an exciting period in your life and combined with the experience of university studies should be a high point in your lives. Apart from the availability of the dons, proctors, and senior resident, I would like you to know that I maintain an open-door policy in my office and would be pleased to talk with any of you about your difficulties and concerns.

There is another important area that I would like to address, and that concerns the various rules and regulations in each of the residences. These rules and regulations are in place for the benefit of the majority of the students living in residence. We appreciate that social interaction and parties form an important part of the lifestyle, but residence must also be a place wherein a student can quietly study and prepare assignments. Our regulations, a copy of which is provided in your room, are designed to provide freedom for the individual and yet be mindful of the needs of others for a quiet place to study. Please read these regulations as the university will be very clear in enforcing them this year. Our residences are full, and we refuse to allow a few discordant students to prevent the majority from enjoying all the benefits of residence life. Once again, please remember that these regulations are in place for specific purposes, and will be enforced.

Statement of Principles of Canadian University Press

We, the members of Canadian University Press, Affirm that we hold the following principles in common:

That the major role of the student press is to act as an agent of social change, assisting students in understanding and acting against oppression and injustice, and emphasising the right and responsibilities of the student;

That the student press must, to fulfill this role, perform both an educative and active function, and critically support the aims of groups serving as agents of social change;

That the student press must use its influence as an agent of social change responsibly, as outlined in the Canadian University Press Code of Ethics, presenting campus, local, national, and international news fairly and accurately and interpreting ideas and events to the best of its ability;

That the student press as its main priority assist students in acting against any system where it is found to be preserving hierarchies based on power and privilege, or to be oppressive to women, lesbians and gay men, indigenous people or ethnic, religious or other minorities;

That the student press must use its relative freedom from commercial and other controls to ensure that it acts in accordance with its major role, and to examine the issues that other media avoid.

We affirm that the following rights and responsibilities are necessary for the effective implementation of the above principles:

That Canadian University Press members have the right to determine and uphold their editorial policy, including advertising policy, regardless of pressure from student governments, administrations, or any others;

That members have the right to be free from implicit editorial control resulting from financial control of the newspaper by student governments, administrations, or any others;

That, to the fullest possible extent, members should be financially autonomous from any other group other than the students who fund them;

That members have the right to receive in full and without delay student levies collected by administrations or budgets approved by student governments;

That members should have a written constitution including the following:

That the staff democratically determines the newspaper's editorial policy and internal structure;

That the newspaper guarantees regular, publicized staff meetings with democratic procedures;

That the staff has the right to elect, impeach or censure its editors, co-ordinators or other staff positions;

That the newspaper defines qualifications for voting staff members;

That the staff alone evaluates through due process charges that any of its members have acted irresponsibly;

That the newspaper must be open to, but not limited to, all students;

That the newspaper must provide a forum for the free exchange of ideas and opinions among, but not limited to, students;

That the newspaper has the right to prohibit publication of material that it deems to be sexist, racist, or homophobic, or that contravenes Canadian laws on libel or hate literature;

That members have the responsibility to participate in Canadian University Press, as outlined in its constitutional bylaws;

That members have the responsibility to provide a forum for and respect the free exchange of ideas and opinions within Canadian University Press.

We affirm that these principles define us as a co-operative, and that collectively we have the right to set membership criteria and to evaluate, with full consideration for due process, members' adherence to these principles;

And that only continual criticism, refinement and re-evaluation can ensure that this remains a living document.

Lambda

Lambda Publications is the student-operated newspaper at Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ontario. While partially funded by the Students' General Association, Lambda is autonomous from other University organizations, both student and administrative.

Lambda is published weekly each Thursday during the academic year, save holidays. 3,000 copies are printed and distributed on the Laurentian Campus.

Lambda Publications is a member of the Canadian University Press. As such, it is democratically controlled by its staff. Staff meetings are held every Friday Morning at 10:30 am in the Lambda office, Room G-1, Student Street. Membership in Lambda Publications is open to all members of the Laurentian University community and is contingent upon three published contributions during the fall term, or five published contributions during the academic year.

The opinions expressed in the copy of this newspaper are not necessarily those of Lambda Pub-

Message from the SGA

the local, provincial and national levels.

The SGA is here to help you with your life at Laurentian. We can do this by performing such diverse functions as putting on dances, lobbying against tuition and residence fee increases, and giving funding to clubs. What is needed to make these endeavours a success is participation. Without your participation none of this will work.

This will probably include attempts to drastically raise tuition fees, cut provincial government funding to universities and lay off faculty. It would also mean the restructuring of the university system in North-eastern Ontario. Last year's Parrott Report was only the forerunner of what will be happening this year.

As it should be, the SGA Executive will be approachable this year. The SGA Office hours are 9 am to 12 noon and 1 pm to 4 pm, Monday thru Friday, but feel free to approach me at any time.

Barry Schmidt
President
Students' General
Association

Students at Laurentian will be facing many challenges in the next year. The Provincial government's Bovey Commission will be making recommendations on how to restructure the entire university system of Ontario.

I'd like to welcome all first year students to Laurentian and welcome back all upper year students. This year should be a lively one. The SGA has a wide variety of activities and services planned. In addition, we are anticipating a very active year representing students at

Hello,
As Women's Commissioner at the Students' General Association, I would like to welcome you to the 84-85 session at Laurentian University.

When students first come to university, many are out to find out the truths of the world beyond Mum and Dad's door-step, and what they encounter is the administration of Laurentian and a lot of closed doors and busy signals.

One of the few places where you can go and be sure to be welcomed, no matter what your opinions and peculiarities, is the student newspaper, Lambda.

The atmosphere is one of covert activity and often open insanity, depending on how close it is to press time. No matter which, there is always something going on — a revolution being plotted, a discussion taking place, a story being worked out, an interview being held, a party being planned.

Lambda is a collective, so at times decisions may seem to take longer but the opinions of everyone are taken into account. A final consensus is reached by the staff as a whole.

A Canadian University Press member, Lambda is committed to being an agent of social change. The nature of this change, and the direction the paper takes, are once again, matters for the entire staff to work out.

Generally those who enjoy working on the paper aren't afraid to take stands on issues, don't accept the status quo as necessarily desirable, like to know all the inside stories about what's going on on-campus, and don't need copious amounts of sleep.

Meetings are held Fridays at 10:30 am in the Lambda office, G-1 Student Street, but feel free to drop in any time with suggestions, questions, comments, pictures, extra bodies, or whatever inspires you at the time.

New OFS president says solidarity is essential

by Irene Marushko
The Charlatan

The Ontario Federation of Students, under its new president Monika Turner, will be working to "put conflicts aside and work on issues all students want to work on."

Turner, 25, took office at the OFS/CFS-O annual general meeting held this June at Carleton University. She said she has seen too much fragmentation in her years of working in the Ontario student movement, and wants to resolve this.

"Ontario is a diverse, large province. We have enough issues that we need solidarity. We have to continue to make sure we don't lose sight of our goals."

She said, for example, that unity is especially necessary now when the Bovey Commission might change the face of the entire university system in Ontario. Turner says she senses the OFS is "more together" because such an issue prevents fighting.

Another goal Turner has is to increase the membership of the OFS, especially in the area of community colleges. Of the 22 colleges in Ontario, only seven belong to the OFS, and three out of 15 universities are not members.

She said as the OFS develops its image as a strong lobby group, she is confident universities will join. However, there is more of a problem trying to get colleges to join.

"The OFS has been seen as a university-dominated organization. We're trying to dispel this fear college students seem to have."

She said she wants to create a commission to deal specifically with college students' problems.

Turner said the basic problem is that most college governments are not as well organized as university governments, so it is harder to get them to join in the first place.

The OFS will be operating on a tight budget in the coming year. Although it has managed to solve the financial problems it suffered a few years ago, she said there is still no room for over-spending.

The OFS's main source of revenue comes from its members.

Turner has been active in the McMaster Students' Union for over three years and has also been involved in the OFS/CFS-O since 1979. She

New Research Centre for LU

Laurentian University will be provided with $1.5 million to set up a Mining Development and Mineral Research Centre the Honourable Judy Erola, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, announced this August.

This amount is provided through the $25 million budget allocated by the Government of Canada to the Centres of Specialization Fund which is designed to help universities create new capacity or improve existing strengths in research and human resource development in areas related to the interests and responsibilities of the Government of Canada.

"The Fund is designed to complement other programs of federal departments, agencies and granting councils," said Erola. "In this way, it responds to specific needs not covered by existing universities' assistance pro-

The overall goal of the Centre is to enhance the interdisciplinary focus of research and development related to the exploration and exploitation of mineral and metal deposits. Its specific objectives include: the design, development and testing of new equipment, models and methods for the exploration of minerals; research and development in the physical and chemical properties of metals and minerals in order to improve techniques for drilling, dynamiting, mine construction and extraction; research into health and safety in the mines; and the study of the impact of the industry on the environment.

Engineers Appealing Ruling

Saskatoon (CUP) — The Engineering Students' Society at the University of Saskatchewan is appealing a decision of the Saskatchewan Human Rights Commission, whose Board of Inquiry ruled March 7 that the ESS's paper, the Red Eye, had violated the province's human rights code by belittling the dignity of women.

The ESS had originally decided not to appeal the decision because of financial considerations, but were approached by Regina lawyer Fred Dunbar, who offered to take the case for free.

Dunbar called the inquiry's ruling "a bad decision", adding that "It had to be appealed in the public interest."

The appeal is based on 21 different grounds, covering virtually all aspects of the inquiry's decision.

The appeal states that the Board of Inquiry was wrong to have applied criteria relevant to hate literature to the material contained in the 1979 and 1981 editions of the Red Eye.

Also under question is whether or not freedom of expression can or should be limited if the material in question has no redeeming social value. This is one of ridicule, and on the grounds that the section of the Saskatchewan Human Rights code preventing the printing of material promoting hatred on the basis of sex is unconstitutional.

Dunbar also takes issue with the Board of Inquiry's orders which force the 1983-84 and 1984-85 executives and Red Eye staffs to attend educational workshops set up by the Human Rights Commission. Dunbar also thinks it unfair that the defendants were forced to pay the cost of three days of Board of Inquiry hearings.

ESS President Todd Gattinger called the orders an "injustice", saying that he was in Grade 11 when one of the offending Red Eyes was published.

University of Saskatchewan Law professor Donna Greschner says it is impossible to predict what the result of the appeal will be since, as of the end of 1982, there were only four Canadian cases dealing with legislation equivalent to Section 14 of the Saskatchewan Human Rights Code.

"But when you cite 21 grounds of appeal, of which only four or five are ludicrous or non-meritorious, the chances of you winning on the remaining 16 or 17 are certainly good."

"This is a case that could go all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada," predicts Greschner.

The Saskatchewan Coalition Against Porn filed a motion on June 5, the day the trial opened, to be allowed to present evidence which would, according to coalition spokesperson Susan Dusell, "present a wider range of viewpoints."

Publications like the Red Eye, Dusell said, "encourage men to act in an aggressive and abusive way towards women and children. We support the Human Rights Board's decision, but we feel that it could be taken one step further."

SPORTS

by Randy Pascal

It is with a great deal of enthusiasm and anticipation that I look forward to the 1984-85 Laurentian Inter-collegiate sports season as I return to assume the role of sports editor of our distinguished university paper. With the entire Laurentian community still buzzing about the incredible performance of Laurentian's own Alex Baumann at the L.A. Olympics, many people can hardly wait for the arrival of varsity sports. It is most unfortunate that the large majority of Canadian varsity athletes do not receive the recognition they deserve.

At Laurentian, our situation is better than most. We have enjoyed, for a great many years, the benefits of several championship and highly competitive teams. Laurentian students have responded in turn by vocally and enthusiastically supporting Voyageur teams and individuals. It is my hope that this support can rise to new highs in '85 (Catchy phrase!).

In order to achieve this, Laurentian students, new and old, must become involved! Lambda, for instance, is anxiously awaiting the arrival of sports writers and photographers. An increased staff in the Lambda sports department could certainly help in ensuring a product that students, athletes and coaches alike can be proud of.

Should you be interested in either of the previously mentioned positions, please drop me a line at the Lambda office (on Student Street) or call me at home (969-2824).

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to welcome all Laurentian students back to school and hope that you can make the reading of this column as consistent a ritual as is the weekly consumption of several...

Grants for LU

Thirty Laurentian scientists will share a total of $361,948 in grants awarded by the Natural Science and Engineering Research Council of Canada (NSERC) for 1984-85. In addition, the University received a general grant of $47,200 for disbursement.

The awards to the 30 scientists are composed of operating and equipment grants and are going to professors in the Departments of Physics, Biology, Geology, Chemistry, Psychology, Mathematics, and the Schools of Engineering and Physical Education.

Lunch Hour Films

The Film "Emily Carr: Growing Pains" will be shown at Laurentian University Museum and Arts Centre, Wednesday, September 5, 1984 at 12:15 pm.

This film depicts the life of Emily Carr as she grows from a strong-willed child to an introspective young woman.

Coffee will be served and viewers are welcome to bring a lunch.

The following Wednesday another film, "Emily Carr: Little Old Lady on the Edge of Nowhere", will be viewed. This film explores the later artistic development of Emily Carr, after her meeting with the illustrious Group of Seven.

'CRAZY FINGERS' GUIDO...

(roaming seranader and freelance Lambda Contributor)

NEEDS YOU!

Hey, Señor and Señorita Laurentian Student. Lambda has always made me feel right at home—as these people here always say "We don't need talent, we need you Guido!" Well now I am offering you a chance to also feel right at home. All that I am saying is to show your stuff—write, draw, sing or swat flies off the burritos, we're not too particular. Come and visit us today at G1 Student Street. And if you come soon, Crazy Fingers Guido... that's me... may just have a little shot of teequilla waiting for you. Remember though, it's BYA! (Bring your own lemon) Well, Hasta La Vista for now Hope to see you soon!

Guido's pet, a 151 proof teequilla worm, is also residing at Lambda.

History tells us that...

Ancient Greeks chose the name Lambda for a letter in their alphabet

Scientists have chosen the Greek letter Lambda as the symbol for wavelength

20 years ago, Laurentian students chose Lambda as the name for their newspaper

Today Lambda chooses for itself
